To whom it may concern:

As a partner at McCormick & Priore, I have had the pleasure of working directly with Jeri Kagle. I am happy to recommend her.

Jeri has served as a trial consultant in several cases in which I was lead trial counsel. Jeri has a rare intuition about people and their motivations. She is extraordinarily perceptive and adept at using her observations to our advantage in representing our clients. She has worked with us both in preparing and presenting the testimony of several lay and expert witnesses, helping us shape themes and convey messages. In each case, she has brought to the table the perspective of an outsider to the case, illustrating which aspects of our case worked and which needed improvement. Jeri is creative and resourceful, and enthusiastic throughout.

Perhaps Jeri's greatest strength, however, is her ability to work with the team. Often, the egos of trial counsel can be our greatest weaknesses. Jeri has demonstrated time and again an uncanny ability to offer honest, constructive criticism, even when her suggestions may be at odds with the otherwise prevailing wisdom on a case. Invariably, she is able to convey her suggestions without ever demeaning the opinions of counsel, or in any way chilling the creative influences of the trial team. Jeri brings an almost "therapeutic" tone to the solutions she suggests, and is a welcome addition. Frankly, we feel she has been directly accountable for much of our success in resolving the cases in which she has become involved.

In addition, Jeri is simply a pleasure to work with. I happily recommend her without reservation or hesitation.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions you may have.

Very truly yours,

Scott J. Tredwell, Esquire
